FRENCH CABINET IS OUT; DALADIER QUILTS TO PREVENT STRIFE

Last Night's Riots Gravest In History of the French Republic

MOBS STILL IN STREETS

Announcement Brings Out Cheers and Singing of Marseilles

PARIS, Feb. 7.—(INS)—The cabinet of Edouard Daladier resigned this afternoon. Capitulating to the demands of milling thousands in the streets of Paris, the Prime Minister wrote to the Elysee Palace and announced to President LeBrun the retirement of his government. A brief communique issued by Daladier himself at 2.10 this afternoon announced that he had resigned to "prevent further bloodshed" following last night's riots, the gravest in the history of the third Republic.

Even as he wrote his announcement, mobs, ignorant of his intention, formed in the boulevards and headed for the Chamber of Deputies where Daladier last night had achieved three parliamentary victories over foes who sought to oust him in the struggle over the $40,000,000 Stavinsky financial scandal.

The retiring Premier said he was unwilling to order troops to fire upon manifestants in further demonstrations, responsible for order, "read the communique," "refuses to maintain it today by the use of exceptional measures susceptible of causing bloody repression. The government does not wish to send soldiers against the manifestants. The President of the Council of Ministers has presented the cabinet's resignation to President LeBrun."

But at the Palace De La Bourse, where financiers were gathered eagerly awaiting news, an illustrated moving sign was suddenly displayed across the building announcing that "Daladier has resigned." This was based on an announcement from the Foreign Office as the Premier left for Elysee Palace. Immediately pandemonium broke out and brokers by the hundreds set up a cheer and began singing the Marseilles.

Fifteen Passengers Hurt In Crash of Bus at Oxford Valley

Fifteen persons were injured late yesterday afternoon when a bus of the Short Line Corporation crashed into a concrete abutment after figuring in a collision with a truck and touring car on the Lincoln Highway at Oxford Valley. All the victims were passengers in the bus. Four were treated at Mercer Hospital, Trenton, three others at the office of Dr. Henry Lovett at Langhorne, and the remainder at the scene of the accident by partolmen of Langhorne State Highway Patrol.

Solomon Gross, 54 years old, of 744 Greenwood Avenue, Trenton, is in Mercer Hospital, suffering from lacerations of the scalp and head and bruises. Mrs. Fanny Greenberg, 48 years old, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., is in the same institution with contusions of the chest and possible fractured skull. Neither is said to be in a serious condition.

Lloyd Ainslie, 15 years old, of 80 Riverside Drive, New York, and Louis Jackson, 35 years old, of 609 Second Street, S. W., Washington, D. C., porter on the bus, were both treated at Mercer for lacerated lips.

Philip Cohen, of 210 E. 56th Street, Brooklyn, received lacerations of the head and possible fracture of the left shoulder, while his wife, Mollie, was cut about the face and her jaw was bruised. Burdett Steph, of Chester County, a student at Lincoln University, received cuts of the nose and face. They were treated at the office of Dr. Lovett.

The bus, which was on its way from Washington to New York, contained about 15 passengers and was operated by Charles S. Manters, of 14th and K streets, Washington. The truck was operated by Albert Sines, of 3113 Unruh street, Philadelphia, while the auto figuring in the collision was operated by Thomas B. Cashman, of Long Hill Road, Stirling, N. J. All the drivers escaped injury.

According to Highway Patrolmen Diem and Stabile, Sines, who was driving toward Philadelphia, pulled out of traffic and crashed into the bus, causing it to strike Cashman's car, which was traveling in the same direction as the truck. The bus then crashed into the concrete abutment and was badly damaged. Passengers were thrown from their seats and tossed about the vehicle.

Passing autoists took four of the injured to the hospital. The crash took up traffic on the highway for a time.

AWAY FOR WEEK-END

A visit was paid on Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Capella and daughter, Veronica, Dorrance street, to Antonio Capella, Philadelphia, who was recently injured in an automobile accident. The Bristolians passed the week-end with Mrs. Capella's parents in Holmesburg.

WILLING TO CONTINUE CWA

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—President Roosevelt is willing to continue operations of the Civil Works program beyond May 1st, the day originally scheduled for its ending, if conditions at the time warrant such action. This became known at the White House today as administration leaders in the Senate pushed a drive to enact the $950,000,000 CWA appropriation within the next three days. Mr. Roosevelt has studied conditions and is reluctantly leaning toward the belief that unless the normal Spring employment pick-up brings startling results, extension of the CWA will be justified.

STOKES A CANDIDATE

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—Congressman Edward L. Stokes of this city today had joined the race for the governorship. He announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination last night in an address at Allentown. Stokes said his platform calls for a general reduction in taxes.

STRIKERS STRIVE TO KEEP LINES

Wilkes-Barre, Feb. 7.—Strikers in this district strove to maintain their picket lines today as idle anthracite workers began to return to their posts in view of the possibility that the strike called by the United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania will be rescinded this Friday when delegates resume their convention. Although District President T. A. Maloney cautioned pickets to hold their line today while officers of the union sought further assurances from the operators, there will be no discrimination against strikers if the walk-out is called off, it was reported.

GAS EXPLOSION ROCKS SECTION

Harrisburg, Feb. 7.—A wide section of suburban Steelton was shaken early today when a gas pipe exploded in the Steelton plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company shattering hundreds of window panes in the factory. One employee was overcome by gas but not seriously affected. Frank A. Robbins, Jr., general manager of the Steelton plant said the explosion occurred because of air in the pipe which carries gas from a blast furnace to the rolling mill.

"SIGHT METER" IS VERY IMPORTANT INVENTION

Enables Quick and Certain Testing of Lighting of Any Room

GREAT AID TO EYES

A fourth of the energy of the average human being is consumed in the process of seeing, and people nowadays are using their eyes an average of 30 per cent more than they did a generation ago, it was pointed out by W. G. Sterrett, Eastern Division manager of the Philadelphia Electric Company, with headquarters at Jenkintown, in an interview stressing the relation of lighting to vision.

"Older people find that, because of the decrease in the size of the pupils of their eyes with the years, they need twice as much light as a youngster," Mr. Sterrett said. "Even by rough tests it is known that 71 per cent of people over 50 years have defective vision, and that 95 out of every hundred persons over 60 years are in the same boat."

"Watch your child as he reads," says the new science of seeing, "and, if the book or paper is held less than fourteen inches away provide more light at once."

ARMY AIR SERVICE WOEFULLY UNPREPARED, HOUSE MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE IS TOLD

By William S. Neal

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright 1934 by I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(INS)—Astounding charges that the army air service, designed to equal the best in the world, is woefully unprepared for real battle have been submitted to the House military affairs committee in secret sessions, it was disclosed today. The general indictment includes testimony that although the army has 1,800 planes fewer than 500 could be put into the air against a modern fighting force, fully equipped with the latest radio devices and bombs to hurl at the enemy.

This picture of the condition of an air force designed to equal any in the world has caused dismay to veteran advocates of air preparedness. It is indignantly denied by high ranking officers, who have appeared before the committee.

The charges may be brought into the open in public hearings which will be held by the committee on the McSwain Bill, paying the way for a second five-year aviation program to put the United States in the front rank of the major air powers.

While all witnesses appearing before the committee concede that many of the army's pursuit and bombing planes are among the fastest and best

As French Rioters Demanded Fall of Government

This picture, just received in this country, shows demonstrators rioting along the Champs Elysees in Paris prior to the fall of the Chautemps ministry. Serious outbreaks occurred a week later when attempts were made to storm the Chamber of Deputies following the vote of confidence given the new ministry of Premier Daladier.

SHEPHERDS LODGE SEC'Y STARTS HER 29TH YEAR

Mrs. Warren Thompson Has Served in That Capacity For Past 28 Years

LODGE STARTED IN 1897

This is one of a series of articles in which an effort has been made to record the history of various organizations in this area. Some idea of that which has been accomplished by the organizations is also given and as much data is published as has been available. The information upon which the articles are based has been furnished by those still active in the organizations.

Article X.

On Monday evening Mrs. Warren Thompson started her 29th year of service as scribe of Shepherds Delight Lodge, No. 1, Shepherds of Bethlehem. Few there are who can boast of such a record in any organization. In addition Mrs. Thompson served in other offices prior to accepting the post of scribe. During her 29 years as such she has not missed more than 15 sessions.

Included in the list of officers installed at the beginning of another lodge year, on Monday evening, were: Commander, Mrs. Gilbert Lovett; vice commander, Mrs. David Neill; marshal, Mrs. John Simons; chaplain, Mrs. Harry Goheen; inside guard, Mrs. Ryan Louder; outside guard, Mrs. Adella Barth; past commander, Mrs. Mary Cahoon; mistress of ceremonies, Mrs. M. Britton; scribe, Mrs. Warren Thompson; accountant, Mrs. Alfred McLaughlin; treasurer, Mrs. Carrie McBrien.

Faces Crisis

Premier Daladier

Though he won two victories in the Chamber of Deputies, Premier Edouard Daladier is faced with the most serious situation with which the French Republic has been confronted since the World War as thousands of rioters are fighting in the streets and threatening the Chamber of Deputies.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS IN MONTHLY SESSION

Routine Business Transacted By Members of Directors' Board

ALL WERE PRESENT

The old school building on Wood street is no longer being used for school purposes. The classes which have been assembling in this building have been transferred to other buildings.

The building is now being used entirely for storage purposes.

The school board last night decided to pay the transportation expenses of the pupils to Quakertown next month to attend the annual scholastic meet.

It was reported that the board had applied to CWA for additional money with which to pay painters for painting the various school buildings. Completion of the painting job will depend upon whether or not the additional money is granted.

Stanford K. Runyan, chairman of property committee, reported upon the progress being made in painting the buildings and of other repairs and improvements which had been made. New lights have been placed in the Bath street building.

Mrs. Laura C. Taylor, Mrs. Asa Fabian and Mrs. Gillies reported visiting the schools and told of their observations.

Directors present were Green, Taylor, Fabian, Gillies, Runyan, Metzger, Molden.

Monthly Card Party of The Beta Gamma Club Is Held

The high rummy scorers were: Henry Streeter, 546; Lillian Holmes, 525; Edith Allen, 506; and May Vandoren, 334.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Trass, Wilson avenue, were recent visitors of relatives in Garfield, N. J.

ARREST TWO MORE FOR THEFT OF TRUCK

Men Will Be Turned Over To Philadelphia Police Today

SOLD OLD BAGS HERE

Two more were arrested late yesterday in connection with the theft of an automobile truck and contents in Philadelphia. The arrests were made in Croydon by Chief of Police Linford J. Jones and County Detective Russo. The two men will be turned over to the Philadelphia police.

The pair taken into custody late yesterday was Charles Miller, 36, married, 5th Avenue and State Road, Croydon, and Morris Cunningham, 35, single, 3421 Emerald street, Philadelphia. The arrests were made at Miller's home in Croydon.

The arrest of the pair followed the arrest of a companion, Herbert Conroy, on Monday afternoon, when the truck he was operating crashed into a sedan driven by Mrs. Benjamin Ahart, Croydon, at State Road and Patterson avenue, Croydon. Mrs. Ahart was slightly injured and her car damaged. Conroy was held in $1300 bail for court by Justice of Peace James Laughlin, charged with driving while intoxicated and with being a "hit-and-run" driver. Conroy was arrested after the accident by Chief Jones and Fireman William Bennett on the Bristol Pike, after he had failed to stop following the accident.

With the arrest of Conroy it was found that he was wanted by the Philadelphia police for stealing the truck of B. Fisher, 6035 Spruce street, Philadelphia. Conroy gave his address as 2045 East Westmoreland street, Philadelphia.

The three men when confronted with each other, all admitted they had stolen the truck in Philadelphia at about one o'clock Monday afternoon. Miller, it is stated, drove the truck to Bristol with its load of burlap bags in which Fisher is a dealer. The bags were sold to Joseph Goldstein here or $5. The trio then drove to Croydon where they spent the $5 for drink. It was this drink which caused Conroy's arrest.

Sixteen Women Gather For Meeting of The Ladies' Aid

Mrs. William Barnfield and Mrs. Florrie Brown were joint hostesses at evening to members of the Ladies' Aid, Harriman M. E. Church, at the home of the former, 240 Monroe street.

Sixteen members were present. Plans were made for a doughnut sale next Tuesday in the church basement.

The next meeting will be February 20th, at the home of Mrs. Adrian Busram, 1814 Benson Place, when she and Mrs. John Bench will be hostesses.

MAKING POCKETBOOKS

The Camp Fire Girls will hold a meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Marian Bolton, Washington street. The members are interested in making leather pocketbooks, at the present time.

CLUB PLANS

The Junior Travel Club members will meet Thursday evening in the club room on Cedar street at seven o'clock sharp. At this meeting, further plans will be discussed relative to the card party and fashion show which they will hold Monday evening. At eight o'clock, the members will entertain members of Junior Clubs in Bucks County and the meeting promises to be an interesting one.

Regular use of the Courier classified column is economical and profitable.

"The Very Idea" Will Be Presented at Hulmeville

HULMEVILLE, Feb. 7.—"The Very Idea" is the title of the sketch which the Girls' Friendly Society of Grace P. E. Church will stage at the community welfare entertainment in the Methodist Church next Monday evening. Ten of the members of the organization are to participate, and the characters impersonated will be those of local people.

The participants: Mrs. Walter Hanns, whose home is a gathering place for inquisitive neighbors; Mrs. Thomas Longhurst, who hates anything in the nature of a mystery; Miss Margaret Perry, who doubts that any secret holds innocent facts; Mrs. Norman Davis, who feels duty-bound to look into unexplained matters; Mrs. Robert Brien, always hoping for the worst; Richard A. Hopkins, president of the P. T. A.; Mrs. Stanley Buckman, a keen worker for the morale of her town; Mrs. J. M. Force and Mrs. Linn Schatzer, sisters who love gossip; Mrs. Thomas K. Schatt, a school teacher who hopes in vain to keep her own secret.

This sketch with others, and special music, round out a most interesting program. Proceeds will be for the local welfare expenses.

Arrest Two Men On Entering Neshaminy Place

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 7.—Charged with breaking and entering the home of Charles Bittner, of Neshaminy, Walter Phelan and Allen Campon, both of Neshaminy, were held in $500 bail for further hearing when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Fisher at Neshaminy yesterday.

According to police, Phelan and Campon broke into the home last Sunday and a shot gun and a small sum of money were stolen. They were arrested by State Trooper John P. McDevitt and Constable Charles Creely. They will be given a further hearing on February 19.

WIDENING TRAIL OF GRAFT AND SCANDAL THREATENING THE NEW DEAL, IT IS SAID

By Paul C. Yates

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(INS)—A constantly widening trail of graft and scandal involving government contracts and the activities of lawyers, lobbyists today created an unprecedented situation in the national capital.

Both Congress and the Administration invoked extraordinary measures to stamp out incipient irregularities threatening the new deal and to punish the perpetrators of frauds against the government during the last three Republican regimes.

Not in the memory of the oldest Washingtonians has the fight against

ORDER BRISTOL MAN TO PAY $6 WEEKLY TO SUPPORT FAMILY

Joseph Peppe Must Contribute Toward Cost of Family's Support

THIEF GETS JAIL TERM

Robert Grubbe and Son-in-Law Admit Stealing Shirts

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 7.—Charged with non-support, Joseph Peppe, of Reading, formerly of Bristol, was directed to pay an order of $6 per week for the support of his wife and three children. Peppe, who formerly was employed by the Starkey Farms, is alleged to have deserted his wife, Anna Peppe, numerous times. County Detective Russo testified that Peppe was living with another woman and was not supporting his wife and children.

Pleading guilty to stealing $168 worth of shirts from a Quakertown Shirt Company, Robert Grubbe and his son-in-law, charged with larceny and receiving stolen goods, were sentenced Monday by President Judge Hiram H. Keller.

Grubbe, who served as night watchman at the Fishman Shirt Company from which he stole the merchandise, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1 and the costs of prosecution and serve not less than four months nor more than three years in the County Prison.

Judge Keller suspended sentence on Joseph Calabro, on condition that he pay a fine of $1, the costs of prosecution, and reimburse the shirt factory owner for the amount of merchandise stolen. A prison sentence of three months to three years was suspended. Calabro agreed to make restitution for 14 dozen shirts.

Arrested by Trooper George M. Sauer, of the State Police, and County Detective Russo, both defendants confessed to the officers they stole the shirts at night, and that Calabro sold them in Philadelphia.

It was testified that Grubbe handed the shirts out the window to his son-in-law in three and four dozen lots, and he disposed of them in Philadelphia.

A fake telephone call, staged by the officers, trapped the defendants.

Marshall J. Whitecraft, charged with non-support of his wife and two children, was given a chance to make good. He was directed to report to Judge Hiram H. Keller on March 12 concerning his progress. Taking the stand for the Commonwealth, Mrs. Cecelia Whitecraft told the Court her husband was in arrears approximately $305.

Whitecraft, who is a resident of Southampton, is employed by the Dugan Brothers Baking Company in Trenton, N. J. In 1925 the Court made an order of $7 per week.

Serving five months in the County Prison, Herbert Campbell, a Negro, who pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery, was granted a parole by Judge Keller on the condition that he pay the costs. Campbell told the Court he "was drinking and got mixed up at a party," and said to the Court "I learned two or three lessons in jail."

Fleeing from the scene of the crime, Campbell, a tall Negro, and former railroad employe, flagged an express train by telling them "there was a broken rail a little ways up the track."

The Negro, wishing to return to Jacksonville, Florida, used this method of escape.

Tenth Birthday of Joseph Foster Marked by a Party

Joseph Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Foster, 607 Beaver street, was ten years old yesterday and celebrated by entertaining a few friends at dinner. The table decorations were in keeping with St. Valentine's Day and favors were red baskets filled with candy.

Games were played, and a prize was awarded to Francis Roarty in the "Lone Star Game," and one to Paul McVaine for the bowling game.

William Roarty entertained the guests by showing moving pictures.

LESS WAR TALK

The softened tone of dispatches from Tokyo dealing with Japanese-American relation is a development to give encouragement to all Americans interested in fostering good will between these two nations.

What has caused this change must be left to speculation. Whether it was recognition of Russia or the projected strengthening of the American fleet to treaty limits can not be known. That a change has taken place in the attitude of Japanese officials toward the United States is evident, though, to any observant reader of current dispatches from Japan. There is an absence of the challenging statements formerly attributed to "a spokesman for the foreign office" and aimed at certain American policies or proposals. Not many months ago such statements were frequent. They at times took on an almost belligerent tone.

Most of the comment attributed to official sources now is of a conciliatory nature and stresses the importance of Japan and the United States working together in the interest of world peace and in the settlement of controversial questions arising in the Pacific.

A further and much more definite move for courting American good will now is contemplated by Japan. The plan at present is in only a tentative state, with its complete development depending on a visit to Washington by Ambassador Saito. The latter is scheduled to arrive in the American capital by the latter part of February. He will attempt to size up the situation here as affecting Japanese-American relations and return to Tokyo in May to report his observations to the foreign office.

Foreign Minister Hirota is quoted as expressing the belief that the interests of Japan and the United States are in serious conflict at no point and that the relations between these two countries normally should be smooth. He is represented as aiming at a policy of mutual confidence with America recognizing Japan as the only stable power in Asia and Japan recognizing America's place in the Pacific.

GERMANY UNEASY

Germany's appeal to Great Britain to mediate between Germany and France in the armaments dispute means that Berlin recognizes the danger of the present German position and is anxious to ease this.

According to reports from Berlin, fear that France would succeed in isolating Germany in the disarmament efforts and throw upon Berlin responsibility for failure should the conference be unsuccessful in its purpose caused Berlin to turn to London. The latter was asked to make definite suggestions for breaking the disarmament deadlock.

Although it was believed in Berlin that Great Britain would be hesitant to comply with the request, it appears doubtful if London could justify a refusal. The success of the disarmament conference depends upon the Franco-German situation being solved. If Great Britain can provide the solution and does this, it will have performed a valuable service to the world and added to its own prestige in peace efforts.

That is, it is a fine thing to pay a poor boy's way through college if you do not care a darn about football.

Labor of Love in "Port of Missing Men"

Finding Lost Sailors Hobby of "Mother" Roper

Mrs. Janet "Mother" Roper

The Port of Missing Men

One of the world's most unique jobs—that of tracing missing seamen—is the self-appointed task of Mrs. Jane ("Mother") Roper, matron of the Seaman's Institute, New York. For 40 years, Mrs. Roper has traced wanderers before the mast over the seven seas and into every corner of the world where ships sail. On her "Missing List" at the institute are hundreds of names and photos of men whom she seeks and of whom, sooner or later, she will hear. For she has friends in every port in the world who aid her in her work. Since 1920 Mrs. Roper has traced no less than 5,000 seamen who had been given up for lost. She has also been the means of restoring many a farm lad to the family he left over some little difficulty, for she is "Mother Confessor" to the great army of seafarers who visit New York every year.

NEW YORK, . . . . . (I.N.).
If he doesn't, a shipmate or former comrade will notice it. The result is that "Mother" Roper gets news of another wanderer.

Sailors' Friend

A delicate, gentle, gray-haired woman, Mrs. Roper 40 years ago dedicated her life to tracing lost seamen. She is "mother" to more than 50,000 of the hardy breed who sail the waters of the world before the mast. Her self-appointed task is to keep the light burning in the window to guide the wanderer back to the home stretch. No matter where he may be, if he is alive, sooner or later "Mother" Roper will trace him.

Finding lost men is her religion—a labor of love. Her methods are in no wise complicated. On her bulletin board at the Seaman's Institute, she has a list of missing sailors. Whenever possible she has pictures of the men she seeks. These names she sends to all ports at home and abroad, for she has contacts all over the world. The names are displayed wherever sailors foregather; Singapore, Yokohama, Shanghai, Marseilles, Liverpool, ports that sooner or later every sailor is bound to visit.

Eventually the wanted man will see his name on one of those lists. If he doesn't, a shipmate or former comrade will notice it. The result is that "Mother" Roper gets news of another wanderer.

Mother Confessor

If Mr. Roper wanted to sit down to a typewriter, the chances are that she could write true romances of the sea stranger than the fiction of Jack London, for sailors have no secrets from the grand old lady. She could tell the true reasons why many boys run away to sea. She could also tell why many men deliberately lose themselves, leaving home and friends and burning their bridges behind them. But "Mother" Roper will not talk of these things. She respects the confidence of the men who regard her as their "Mother Confessor."

Sometimes she has been instrumental in smoothing out family differences that led a lad from the farm to seek forgetfulness in the call of the sea, but never does she antagonize those she counsels by moralizing, which characteristic is one of her most endearing charms.

Began in Boston

It is in Boston that Mrs. Roper began her mission work among sailors 40 years ago. Since then the number of men she has traced is legion. In the last 14 years, since 1920, she has found more than 5,000 who were given up for lost.

From all over the country, Mother Roper receives requests to be on the lookout for an errant one. She immediately puts her unique machinery into motion. Into port will come a swagging bucko from the China Sea, or maybe the Caribbean. Ten to one the first person he will call upon is "Mother Roper." When greetings have been exchanged, "Mother" Roper will say: "Have you seen So-and-So from Such-a-Place?" Maybe the new arrival hasn't, but he knows a fellow in Frisco who has. So next time he's in Frisco he passes the word along that "Mother" Roper would like to get the "dope" on So-and-So. In due course, the gentle old lady in New York is in possession of all the facts. She, in turn, notifies the relatives of the wanderer and a reunion is usually the climax.

Only a few weeks ago a mother in Jackson, La., wrote "Mother" Roper that her boy was gone. She feared he was dead. Word was flashed along the waterfront that "Mother" Roper wanted a boy named Richardson. A seaman found him and a surprise was planned for the anxious Louisiana parent. A radio broadcast was planned for a certain night. The mother was inveigled into listening in and the drawing Southern accents of her lost son floated to her over the ether. Knowledge of that mother's joy was the only reward "Mother" Roper desired.

SYNOPSIS

Lovely Stanley Paige could have married any eligible man in her set—there was, for instance, the young lawyer, Perry Devereest, loyal and reliable; but she fell in love with dashing, irresponsible Drew Armitage. Drew told Dennis St. John, his former sweetheart, that although he would have loved Stanley under any circumstances, he would never have become engaged to her had she been poor. Then comes the crash and Stanley's fortune is wiped out. She does not care as long as she has Drew's love, but . . . he says it would be madness to marry on his income. So with a dramatic . . . "Stanley, I shall never forget you and I shall always regret having hurt you—but never having loved you!" he passes out of her life. Though broken-hearted, Stanley accepts the blow stoically. Anxious to be alone she goes for a ride.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Three hours later, she was at home. She went straight to her room and rang for Ellen. "I've figured everything out, Ellen," she said, flinging off her tight little hat, kicking off her slim pumps. "As soon as I've had a bath I'll tell you exactly what I'm going to do."

"It's like this," she continued, emerging from the black and rose fragrance of the bathroom, her slim body wrapped in orchid chiffon, her eyes and voice steady and cool. "I've gone over everything carefully and I've arrived at certain conclusions. It wasn't very hard to do." She flicked Ellen an ironical little smile. Listen to me quietly and don't interrupt—you'll want to but it won't do any good because I'm quite determined." She sat down in a chair, crossed her slim legs and went on evenly. "The money's gone—there doesn't seem to be much doubt about that. Charles Carleton's gone—I wish that might have been prevented. Drew's gone—we'll leave him out of it. Well, I'm going too—I'm getting out. I could delay any drastic change indefinitely, you know how it's done, by visiting around, letting my friends carry me along. They'd do quite a lot, of course. Marcia and Ned would do a lot. So would Perry Devereest. I could write Perry to come back from Canada. Perry wouldn't mind about the money, wouldn't even mind my not being in love with him. I could go back to Aunt Julie, who would find it terribly hard supporting two on her own small income after having the use of my big one. She would hate having to do it but not so much as I would hate doing it. So there you are. I can't go back, I can't accept charity, and I can't marry Perry. So I'm getting out." Her voice became quietly abrupt. "You've saved some money, haven't you, Ellen—enough for yourself?"

"Enough for both of us, Miss Stanley," Ellen's eyes behind their silver-rimmed glasses were misty. Her voice trembled with eagerness.

Stanley shook her head. "No. This time, Ellen, you're not going with me. You're going over to Newark with your sister. She'll be glad to have you—you can help her with her shop. I'm stepping out—alone."

Utter consternation blinded Ellen's blue eyes. "But, Miss Stanley, dear, you can't do that, it isn't fair! After all these years—I can't leave you like that—you can't ask me to!"

"But I am asking you to, Ellen, and because you've never refused me anything, you'll do as I ask now. I've got to get away from everything. Don't you see, Ellen—don't you understand? I've got to fight and struggle and—and be born again! It's the only way I can go on, the only way I can stick it! Can't you see that it is, Ellen?"

Ellen nodded gravely, tears running down her flushed cheeks, splashing onto the black silk of her gown. "Perhaps you're right, Miss Stanley. Perhaps this is something I can't do for you. But remember

"Sure I can take you to a cheap hotel—New York is thick with 'em."

"I'll always be there if you need me. I'll come to you at any time, anywhere."

"I know you will, Ellen. And it will help, knowing that. And now," Stanley thrust the emotion out of her voice, spoke quietly, "we'd better go over the household accounts."

Stanley was the last to leave the apartment. All of her huge wardrobe of frocks and wraps and slender slippers and dainty little hats had been disposed of, sold at a ridiculously low figure to a dealer in such things. There had been a girl in Vienna, who was always going broke and having to sell her clothes. Stanley had remembered her. She had saved only a few necessary things, a tweed coat, a close dark hat, lingerie and a pair of tall, mahogany pumps, a slim tan frock.

She had been cool and business-like about it all. It was Ellen who had wept softly at seeing all the lovely things depart in the possession of a fat and perspiring Jew. Stanley honestly felt no regret. They, the bits of moonlight wisps of rainbow that were her gowns, the soft velvets and drifting chiffons that were her evening wraps, belonged to a girl who was leaving behind—a girl who had lived in a fool's paradise. And now she was leaving both the girl and the paradise behind and going on—alone. She would have no need of these things. She rather thought that she was done forever with moonlight and rainbows and all the other dear, frail, delightful things that make life an illusion and—a tragedy.

She had watched Ellen depart with her trunk, in a taxi, for Newark. Had wanted to rush down the steps and shriek at her to come back, or better yet, to take her along. But she had done neither. Had stood, instead, straight and slim, in a high drawing room window and waved her handkerchief, until the taxi and Ellen's tear-stained face had vanished around the corner.

Now she was quite alone. Behind her, the apartment was strangely, emptily still. Flowers and cigarettes and books had disappeared. The furniture stood shrouded in white sheets, the piano was closed, the hearth swept clean.

She moved away from the high window and stood in the middle of the long, quiet room, in the hot, dry dusk of the late afternoon. She twisted her fingers together tightly and said, in a rough, choked little whisper, "Good-bye, lovely room, good-bye, lovely love—I'm taking the memory of you both away with me—it's bitter-sweet and it hurts but it's going with me, wherever I go, whatever I do."

The taxi-driver grinned good-naturedly. "Sure I can take you to a cheap hotel—New York is thick with 'em—but why not try a rooming-house? They're less money and just as clean."

"Do you know of one?"

"Do I know of one? Say, lady, what I don't know about rooming-houses!" He looked at her appraisingly. "Get in and we'll try Mrs. Foley's—I took a girl there a couple of nights ago—she'd been living in a swell dump on the Drive but something happened to her income and she had to clear out."

Stanley said, "I see," and smiled wearily and climbed into the cab. She leaned her head back against its hot leather cushions and closed her eyes. She wondered if she would come to know the girl who had lived in "the swell dump on the Drive."

The cab stopped with a jerk before a house—a house that was only one of a long street of narrow old houses, all hopelessly shabby, all hopelessly beaten. But the woman who opened the door was clean and efficient looking. She took in Stanley swiftly with one quick comprehensive glance. "I've only got one room vacant; it's small and not any too cool but it might do. It won't be what you're used to, miss, but if it's a place to live cheap you're looking for, you'd better look at it."

"I'm sure it will do very well," Stanley smiled at the woman and paid the friendly taxi-driver, tipping him generously. He looked at the tip, hesitated, and handed her back half a dollar.

"You may be needing it, yourself!" he told her with a grin and went back to his cab. He'd make it up on a gentleman drunk and the kid had looked sort of young and scared. He wondered what it was all about—he'd picked her up at a good address on Park Avenue and left her here. Oh, well, it was all in a day's work. He'd seen queerer things than that: once a girl had committed suicide in his cab and once a woman had paid her fare with a diamond earring.

PARIS — (INS) — Sequins are seen more in the evening, but their use this Winter is discreet. They undoubtedly give color to a gown, just as flowers or bright bits of velvet do.

I had a glimpse at Ciro's, during one of the big gala dinners, of the Baroness Vincego Lo Monaco, the former Lillian Godsol, in a black Chanel gown, with a tiny train and a bolero of the same material with double reverses, the second of which formed sleeves entirely of black sequins.

DOUBLE-DECKER DROPPED BY CARDINAL AND GRAY

By Oscar Corn
(H. S. Press Representative)

The Bristol High varsity quintet was handed a 25 to 20 setback by the fast-passing Doylestown High team. In the preliminary game, the Cardinal and Gray Jay Vees were handily defeated by the County Seat Reserves. Both tilts were played at Doylestown, last night.

It was a fast played game throughout, and both teams displayed an excellent passing attack. Both teams were on their toes during the entire game, and they were continually fighting for the lead. Doylestown had a great advantage in height, and they used this factor to beat Bristol.

The first quarter was "nip and tuck" and Bristol led at the start of the second period, 10 to 9. However, in the second canto Doylestown gained the lead of six points which they held until the last quarter.

Jim Rue's playing in the pivot position for Bristol, added a "bang-up" game and he was the Red and Gray's high scorer with a trio of fouls and field goals. Fretz led Doylestown with a duo of double-deckers and a trio of gift throws.

PLENTY OF ACTION IS PROMISED AT ARENA

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 7.—When two speed kings like Jumping Joe Savoldi and Paul Boesch get together there is bound to be more action and thrills than most wrestling matches produce.

The handsome Paul and Notre Dame's famous ex-grid star are slated to supply the fireworks at Johnny Ipp's weekly mat party at the Arena tonight in a two fall out of three duel.

Neither man has tasted defeat on the Arena mat. It will be the season's most important match for Boesch. In Camden some weeks ago he lost to Savoldi after each man won a fall. He successfully eluded Joe's famous crook-kick for over an hour but was caught napping and the muscular Italian took the deciding fall. Paul is seeking vengeance for that one.

The Camden promoters tried to re-match Savoldi and Boesch but Ipp had first call on Savoldi's services and immediately after Boesch returned to his dressing room last week after his match with Bert Ruhl, Ipp offered him the chance to even the score with the jumper. The popular youngster grabbed the opportunity to tangle with Joe again.

Al "Red Devil" Glecwicz, who has been going like a house afire since he was disqualified in his encounter with Ruhl, faces one of the most formidable grapplers to invade the East in the person of Jerry Monehan. This duel is scheduled to a finish and Al may find that his victories over Sid Nabors and Tiny Roebuck in succession will avail him little if he does not watch his step with the rough and tumble Westerner, who has a reputation for being distinctly unorthodox.

In the 30 minute time limit matches, Scotty McDougall, of Australia, who gave Jack Sherry a bitter battle in his only appearance at the Arena, meets Orville Brown, of Chicago. Louis "yurezak, newest Hungarian sensation, tangles with the burly Sid Nabors. Jim Chinstock returns against Van McDonald, of Ireland, in the third of the 30 minute preliminaries.

Back From Convention Of Delco Burner Distributors

C. W. Winter and J. L. Klug of C. W. Winter, 248 Mill street, distributors of Delco Heat oil burners, have just returned from a Delco Appliance Corporation sales meeting in Philadelphia where they listened to a discussion of the corporation's new product, the Delco Heat Boiler.

The boiler, which C. W. Winter will have on display in Bristol shortly, is a completely co-ordinated oil heating plant for the home. All contained within the attractively finished furniture-steel cabinet, designed for beautification of the home basement, are oil burner, boiler and domestic hot water heater.

Speakers representing the factory were E. L. Sylvester, sales manager; W. B. Montague, promotion manager, and J. L. Sedwick, advertising manager.

"Distributor-dealer facilities of Delco Heat will be greatly expanded this year," declared Mr. Sylvester, "and the sales resulting from the introduction of the Delco Heat Boiler will be augmented by aggressive development of new territory. The Delco Heat sales volume in 1934 will be substantially increased."

"Newspaper advertising this year will be the greatest in Delco Heat history," stated J. L. Sedwick, advertising manager. "Newspapers," he stated, "will continue to be the principal advertising medium."

Mr. Montague discussed features of the boiler, and outlined a comprehensive plan of sales training and sales promotion.

Tomato Growers Hear About Can House Product

FALLSINGTON, Feb. 7.—With 150 tomato growers in attendance, Alvin S. Crispin, president of the tomato council of New Jersey, Monday night explained to various Bucks county growers the functions and purposes of the council at a meeting held here.

Mr. Crispin explained that the council is made up of one grower from each county growing can-house tomatoes. E. H. Lovett, of Yardley, was selected as Bucks county's representative on the council board.

The purpose of the council is to work in co-operation with the canneries, the A. A. A. and work out some agreement in regard to the price of tomatoes in 1934. The association includes in its membership growers and canners from all over the United States.

The speaker told the growers that the committee last year was successful in securing a twenty-five per cent increase in price on can house tomatoes.

Pennsylvania has 35 canneries and annually contracts for 6,000 acres of tomatoes. Bucks county grows about 2,000 acres of can house tomatoes annually.

County Agent William F. Greenwalt attended the meeting.

"Sight Meter" Is Very Important Invention

you consider that 23 per cent of all young people under twenty are handicapped with defective vision? Especially if parents remember that, after all, more than 75 per cent of all human knowledge comes through eye sight.

"Reading is the primary test of seeing. Countless tests prove conclusively that nervous muscular tension decreases as light improves. A man reading by the light of a candle at a distance of one foot was 32 per cent worse off in this regard, after a half hour, than the man who read by a 100-watt lamp at the same distance. A man who read by a 40-watt lamp at the same distance for the same period, suffered sixteen per cent more fatigue than if he had had the benefit of a hundred watt lamp.

"From the standpoint of health and personal efficiency, a recent development—a light-measuring instrument called a 'Sight-Meter'—is proving one of the most important of science's recent inventions. It enables quick and certain testing of the lighting in any room and discloses whether the arrangement and volume are correct for the protection of precious eyesight."

Shepherds Lodge Sec'y Starts Her 29th Year

This lodge will soon inaugurate its 29th year, it having been instituted on the 18th of March in 1897. It was the first lodge of its kind organized in this state, and one of the first few in the United States.

The list of charter members totalled 12, and as the years went by the number increased, slowly at first, and then during the World War and post-war periods the membership increased considerably. Later, however, when families drawn here by shipyard activities commenced leaving the territory at the close of the period of stress, the membership lessened. Today the roster contains the names of 48 men and women from this borough and surrounding section.

Men and women of any creed are eligible for admittance to the Shepherds of Bethlehem, if they have attained their 16th birthday and have not passed the half century mark. Meeting nights of the local lodge are set for the first and third Mondays of each month, with sessions being held in F. P. A. hall, Radcliffe street.

Members are obligated as they are received, and when five have thus been admitted the quintet is initiated by the active workers group which comes here from Philadelphia.

Shepherds Delight Lodge sends delegates annually to the Supreme Convention, which takes in all like lodges in the United States; but the major portion of these lodges are located in the Eastern states.

The lodge pays benefits at times of illness and death; and the local organization assists in supporting the Shepherds of Bethlehem Home at Haddonfield, N. J., giving money from its Home Fund. Members of any Shepherds lodge, regardless of age, are eligible to enter this home.

Widening Trail of Graft Threatening New Deal

tempt charges developing from the destruction of air mail records.

In the spreading panorama of intrigue, with hundreds of millions in tax money as the illicit prize and influential lawyer-lobbyists as the "villains" of the piece, these factors stood out:

1. On instructions of Secretary of War Dern, the Department of Justice started a sweeping inquiry into lobbyist activities affecting the War Department. Dern made the amazing charge that the lobbyists are seeking to force his resignation so as to "cover up" their nefarious activities.

2. The House Naval Affairs Committee summoned former Secretary of the Navy Adams, together with former assistant secretaries David S. Ingalls and Edward Warner, to testify concerning huge profits made by aircraft manufacturers on naval contracts.

3. A minute audit of War Department accounts involving aircraft purchases was ordered by a House Military Affairs subcommittee.

4. Army and Marine Corps experts were summoned to appear before the Black senate committee, following the revelation that profit ranging up to 99 per cent, as disclosed by War Department audits, had been made by a subsidiary of United Aircraft and Transport Company in the sale of airplane equipment to the Army. Air mail papers torn up by Col. L. H. Brittin, vice-president of Northwest Airways, Inc., were recovered.

5. Administration leaders in the Senate laid plans to fight vigorously for jail sentences against former Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken, Jr., and three aviation company officials when these men appear Friday for trial at the bar of the Senate on contempt charges.

6. Attorney General Cummings pressed a grand jury investigation involving charges of fraud in a $2,000,000 truck contract sought in connection with an army contract, for which the CWA allocated funds.

7. The lobbyist "blacklist," first instituted by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, was extended to the War Department. Dern announced the "blacklisting" of Joseph Silverman, New York dealer in surplus army supplies, a few hours before news of the grand jury investigation was made public.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 7.—(INS)—Benjamin G. Eynon, deposed Deputy Secretary of Revenue, entered the political arena today with announcement of his candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Eynon was discharged from the Department of Revenue on August 24, 1932, following charges of maladministration of the State Bureau of Motor Vehicles. He is said to have issued coveted low number automobile license plates to Arthur, Louis, and John Volpe, Pittsburgh racketeers who were slain just before Eynon's dismissal.

Army Air Service Woefully Unprepared, Is Charge Made

of any nation, it is claimed that a large number of the army's planes are obsolete.

The information received on the condition of the air service, which includes that of experienced fliers, is said to emphasize criticism of high ranking officers who have retired or resigned from the army air corps in the past two years.

The army air corps, under the five-year program adopted in 1926, called for 1,800 fighting planes by 1931. With a grant made by the PWA, army officers claim that the program will be fulfilled three years later.

Even this grant, critics have told the House committee, will not bring the air corps to the necessary standard.

The committee in public hearings will consider two bills by Chairman McSwain (D) of South Carolina. The latest calls for an army air force of not less than 4,834 planes—an increase of 3,000 over the present authorized strength. It is estimated that more than $200,000,000 would be required to carry out the program.

ONE of the most colorful characters in the modern sports world, "Kingfish" Levinsky, is very much in the limelight just now. Because of the squabble between the various promoters, managers and piece-men involved in the Carnera-Baer tangle, it now seems certain that Madison Square Garden, which has the champion tied up, will sidetrack Max Baer and give the summer title shot to the Chicago "Kink."

To start out his build-up as heavyweight challenger, the Tar-ruping Litvak from the Wis-ky City will attempt to park his goofy right swings upon the chin of Charley Massera, youthful Pittsburgh heavyweight. This embargo is scheduled to take place Friday at Madison Square Garden.

If the Kingfish hands Massera a shellacking, as is expected, he will then take on the German heavyweight contender, Walter Neusel. Then, if His Majesty comes through these bouts with his fistic reputation, such as it is, still intact, he will be tossed in there with the mountain that walks like a man, better known as Primo-O Carnera, in a battle for the heavyweight championship of this and all other universes.

Meester Levinsky may not be such a bad opponent for Carnera, at that. He fought the big guy on two previous occasions, and is still alive. More than that, the Kink seems to believe that he was robbed of both verdicts in their previous scrambles, and he can point to several newspaper accounts of the fight which support him in his opinion.

Then, too, Levinsky has improved tremendously in the last few months under the crafty tutelage of Fisti-ana's Silver Fox, Pete Reilly. The silver-thatched master mind has made the King get into really good condition, and has improved his boxing considerably while teaching him to shorten his right hand wal-lops.

Levinsky claims to have put Carnera on the deck for no count in one of their former jousts, and he is very anxious for another shot at the giant Italian's lantern jaw.

However, there is always the chance that Prof. Thomas Lough-ran may upset these plans by out-scoring Signor Carnera in their approaching Miami duel.
